designs – sometimes, interpreting small traditional pieces in new ways and at other times, adding small carved details to elegant pieces. Timeless elegance, rich in glamour define Christopher Guy designs as they transcend the boundaries between the traditional and the modern.

DESIGN PHILOSOPHY

From an early age, Christopher was fascinated with elegance. At 16, he worked with his stepfather to embark on their first building project – their very own home in the South of France, which ignited the sparks of passion of design, with his stepfather as a key source of inspiration. Christopher's first creations were brought to life in the mid-90s when he set out to create the world's most fabulous and largest mirror frame collection under the name of Harrison & Gil. To produce this repertoire of beautiful pieces, Christopher bought a parcel of land in Central Java, Indonesia and began designing and building his workshops in 1999. Following the phenomenal success of the mirror frame business, the core philosophy of creating beautiful, original mirror designs was carried through to a growing range of luxury furnishings and accessories collection. In 2006, the company, which comprised of both the original mirror frame line and new furnishings range, was renamed Christopher Guy.

The Christopher Guy workshop in Central Java today covers one million square feet of land built amidst lush Javanese forest. Ace Maison, marketers of some of the world's finest luxury furniture brands, deals with Christopher Guy Flagship in India. The store, at Hyatt Regency, New Delhi, spread across 4000 sq. ft., showcases luxurious dining, living and bedroom concepts.
